/'e-mə-,ser-ē/ (noun) a leader specifically sent on a special mission as a diplomatic representative for MilitaryMentors

The Program: A play on the spelling of 'emissary', eMMissaries (the double M is used to denote MilitaryMentors) are industry leaders who are screened, selected, and trained through a six-month cohort style leader(ship) developmental curriculum to become our 'virtuous insurgency' for mentorship. eMMissaries represent us in positive ways, increase organizational awareness, and seek opportunities to influence and develop others.

The Project: Each eMMissary is required to develop a better understanding of the role civic activities have in society and to learn and apply the principles of leadership, influence, and project management skills through an eMMissary Mentorship or Community Service Project. The scope must align with MM's mission, vision, and values.

The Impact: Here are a few examples of how our eMMissaries are denting the universe...

COVID Relief:

- An Army War College Fellow at the Fletcher School led five other military fellows who provided manning, management, and logistical support the Tufts Medical Center senior staff in their COVID-19 crisis action planning and response, overseeing the efforts of a mid-sized, nonprofit, safety net hospital for 19,000 people in the heart of Boston.
- A retired veteran orchestrated over 20 volunteers in Augusta, GA to identify recipients and charitable organizations for the delivery of 1,400 lbs. of canned food and sundries to, pairing with the Golden Harvest Food Bank, a local Boy Scout troop, a community church, and the nonprofit Under the Bridge Ministries. This also led to a spin-off mentorship program for disadvantage youth and a no-contact outdoor soccer skills clinic.

Leadership Development:

- An active-duty Army audiologist crafted a podcast called "Earful of Leadership", focusing on expanding up-and-coming leaders' knowledge by promoting self-awareness, personal growth, mentorship, diversity, inclusion, and career advancement.
- A director of nursing student services at a university crafted an online resource and in-person mentoring program uniting two college campuses, local area high schools, and a career center in Connerville, IN for the students to understand the intersectionality of civilian and military/veteran healthcare. It has a website that has a repository of veteran stories, a discussion guide, blog posts, and monthly guest speakers. Of note, the project currently continues on well beyond her time as an eMMissary.
